It's that time of year. You've registered for pre-school beginning in the fall and you're wondering how you and your child will navigate transition. Or, you are having new and different separation anxieties pop up in the behavior of your child and want help understanding and navigating these parenting moments.

Come, have a glass of Cal-Ital wine, have some nosh, and let's talk about transition and separation and how to make these very typical parenting challenges smoother and easier for your family. Literature on the current understandings about this developmental period will be provided.

About Jaclyn:

Jaclyn Lafer, PhD has more than twenty years of experience in early childhood education and research. She has a genuine respect for the richness and depth of the experience of becoming and being a parent, with all the ups and downs involved. She has facilitated Parent and Me groups in Hollywood and Pacific Palisades, has a clinical psychology practice in Studio City and a real passion for the early childhood/early parenthood years.
